Set of 4 Premium Grade T/C Mayo Hegar Needle Holder Driver Cross Serrated Tungsten Carbide Inserts Tip Straight 5.5", 6", 7" & 8" Surgical Dental Medical Veterinary Instruments

Mayo Hegar Needle/Suture Holder is also known as a "Needle Driver" and functions as a hemostat. Surgeons and doctors use it to hold the suturing needle for wound closing during surgical procedures or sutures. This instrument is comprised of a handle, joint, and jaws. Mostly, it has a clamp mechanism that locks the needle in place. Thus, it allows the healthcare provider to maneuver the hand through tissues. To attain a firm grip on the needle, the jaws are textured, increasing the applied force following the lever principle.

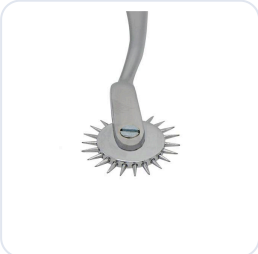

Mayo-Hegar Needle Holders are the most commonly used needle holders, the TC Mayo Hegar Needle Holder has a finer tip than a standard Mayo Hegar and has a fine cross-serrated tip used to hold medium to larger suture needles. Easily adjust clamping force between three notched levels for a strong, sturdy hold. This is perfect for holding small items.

TC MAYO HEGAR NEEDLE HOLDER FEATURES:

- Available in 5.5", 6", 7", 8" Sizes.
- Cross-serrated Tungsten Carbide Jaws.
- Chamfered Jaw Edges Prevent Accidental Suture Cutting.

5 Pcs Hartman Alligator Forceps 3.5" Stainless Steel Billeau Ear Loop Curette Nasal Otology Surgery ENT Diagnostic Instruments

Alligator Ear Forceps are a non-ratcheted, finger ring, ENT instrument commonly used for debridement and removing debris from the ear. These forceps are named after the German physician Arthur. These Ear Forceps used for removing foreign bodies. A common name also is "Crocodile forceps". Alligator forceps are surgical instruments that are great for grasping small objects or removing items from small cavities in the body.

The instrument has a long shaft that is set at a 45-degree angle to the grip, and a small set of serrated jaws at the tip. The jaws bear resemblance to the snout of an alligator, giving rise to the name of the tool. When not in use, the serrated jaws remain open and only close when the handles are squeezed. This function allows for the forceps to be inserted into a small cavity, partially open, and to then be closed on a lodged object, holding the object with a consistent application of pressure.

The ability to fine tune the amount of pressure applied, combined with the long reach of the tool, makes the forceps ideal for removing foreign bodies or for moving sterile dressings in a hard-to-reach area after surgical procedures. This instrument is made from Premium Stainless Steel that is tarnish free, corrosion resistant and

HOW MEDICAL TUNING FORKS WORK?

- In the medical profession, tuning forks remain a preferred method of testing for certain types of hearing loss.
- Testing for hearing loss with a tuning fork is called a Rinne test.
- The Rinne test involves a doctor placing a humming tuning fork near the patient's skull.
- The doctor will then place the fork near the patient's ear.
- Using a stopwatch, the doctor will time how long the patient can hear it by the skull and the ear.
- If the patient feels the fork more through the jaw than they can hear it through the ear there is a problem conducting soundwaves.
- In addition to hearing loss, the tuning fork can be used to evaluate a wide range of other health problems.
- If X-rays are in short supply, doctors will use tuning forks to identify whether a bone is fractured or not.
- Doctors do this by simply striking a tuning fork and placing the vibrating fork close to the affected area.
- Tuning forks can also provide sound therapy which helps induce a deeper state of relaxation.
